On Trump impeachment, divisions between urban and rural Democrats

Public sentiment complex beyond partisan lines.

First-term U.S. congresswoman Cynthia Axne, back home in her rural Iowa district for the Thanksgiving break, faced a room full of farmers on Saturday who made clear their opposition to the impeachment investigation of Republican President Donald Trump.

Axne, 54, avoided any mention of impeachment until one of her constituents, a Democrat who voted for her, said he views the investigation as a waste of time and money: "Let's not vote for impeachment. Let's get stuff done. I'm sick of it!", he bellowed. Others nodded in agreement.

Meanwhile, 1,000 miles away in the old industrial town of Wharton, New Jersey, freshman U.S. congressman Tom Malinowski was treated like a rock star when he told a crowd of about 150 he believed the evidence to impeach Trump was overwhelming.

With each mention of impeachment and denunciation of Trump, Malinowski was greeted with loud applause from voters packed into a tiny library basement, where the room hummed with talk of ousting the president.

These two freshman lawmakers flipped districts from Republican control in the 2018 midterm congressional elections, two of the 41 net gains that helped Democrats regain control of the House of Representatives for the first time since 2011.

Yet on impeachment, as they face close fights for their seats again next November, their approach is starkly different. Axne avoids any mention of it; Malinowski leans into the topic.

Polls show public sentiment about impeachment breaking along partisan lines, but the reaction of Democratic voters in these two swing districts suggests there is also a rural and suburban divide on the issue among Democrats.

"I don't talk about impeachment," Axne, who defeated Republican David Young in 2016 by just two points, said in an interview.

"These are hard working, salt of the earth people who just want to make a living and provide for their families. They're tired of what they consider the bureaucracy and the politics of Washington and that's true to what Iowans are. Impeachment is not a priority in their lives."

"My job is to work for the people here in this district and do a good job for them. But my job also is to protect this country. If we find out that the president has put us in harm's way, then I have absolutely no problem losing a seat over that."

Axne supports the impeachment inquiry, and says if there is proof Trump abused his office and harmed America's national security in his dealings with Ukraine, she will vote to impeach him — even it means losing her seat. She agreed she could face voter backlash.

"My job is to work for the people here in this district and do a good job for them. But my job also is to protect this country. If we find out that the president has put us in harm's way, then I have absolutely no problem losing a seat over that."

To loud applause in his New Jersey district, about 50 miles west of New York, Malinowski said: "The president is free to pursue a foreign policy that he believes is in the national interest, but he is not free to pursue a foreign policy that only serves his political interest."

Malinowski, 53, a Polish-born former employee of the State Department, was the first New Jersey House member to call for Trump's impeachment. He asked the crowd to put up their hands if they were watching the hearings and nearly all of the some 150 people in attendance put their arms in the air.

There were five days of public hearings in the Democratic-led impeachment inquiry which concluded on Thursday.

Guards charged over Epstein's suicide get trial date

Two correctional officers accused of covering up their failure to check on financier Jeffrey Epstein before he hanged himself will face an April 20 trial date. U.S. District Judge Analisa Torres scheduled the trial for Tova Noel and Michael Thomas at a hearing in Manhattan federal court on Monday. Both defendants have pleaded not guilty. Epstein's suicide on Aug. 10 came a little over a month after the well-connected money manager was arrested and charged with trafficking dozens of underage girls as young as 14 from at least 2002 to 2005. He had pleaded not guilty. Prosecutors say that Noel and Thomas, the only correctional officers on duty in Epstein's unit the night before he was found dead, failed to carry out checks on Epstein and falsely recorded that they had. Epstein had been taken off suicide watch shortly before his death. REUTERS

Death toll from Kenya landslides rises to 56

The death toll from landslides in northwestern Kenya triggered on Saturday by unusually heavy rains has risen to at least 56 people, a local official said. The downpour began on Friday in West Pokot County, which borders Uganda, and worsened overnight, causing flooding and mudslides that swept away four bridges and left villages inaccessible by road. Samuel

Poghisio, a senator from the county, told Reuters by phone on Sunday that 56 people were confirmed dead and an unknown number were missing. By Saturday afternoon, local officials had reported 36 dead. "Rescue operations are frustrated by more rain and fog," Poghisio wrote in a text message, adding that police helicopters were struggling to reach the flooded areas. REUTERS

U.S. Supreme Court lets climate scientist's defamation claim proceed Scientist was compared to Jerry Sandusky, a convicted child molester.

The U.S. Supreme Court on Monday allowed a prominent climate scientist to pursue a defamation lawsuit against a conservative magazine and a think tank that compared him to a convicted child molester.

The justices declined to hear appeals filed by National Review magazine and the Competitive Enterprise Institute seeking to overturn a lower court's ruling that allowed the lawsuit filed by scientist Michael Mann to go forward.

One justice, conservative Samuel Alito, dissented, writing that the case raised questions "that go to the very heart of the constitutional guarantee of freedom of speech and freedom of the press."

Mann, a Penn State professor known for his research on climate change, filed suit in a local court in the District of Columbia in 2012 after online posts by the magazine and think tank that compared him to convicted child molester Jerry Sandusky, a former assistant football coach at the same university in State College, Pennsylvania.

The lawsuit seeks unspecified monetary damages.

Mann over the years has clashed with groups and individuals who have sought to discredit his work. He is best known for what is called a "hockey stick" graph that showed an increase in global temperatures in the 20th century.

"Mann could be said to be the Jerry Sandusky of climate science, except for instead of molesting children, he has molested and tortured data."

Rand Simberg

Scientific organizations rejected criticism of Mann's work after investigating the matter. Criticism of Mann by conservative climate change skeptics increased after some of his private emails were leaked in 2009.

The Competitive Enterprise Institute is a libertarian think tank that has said it "questions global warming alarmism." In a 2012 post published on a CEI website, former CEI fellow Rand Simberg compared the investigations into Mann with the then-recent national controversy over Sandusky, who was arrested in 2011 and convicted in 2012 of sexually molesting 10 young boys.

"Mann could be said to be the Jerry Sandusky of climate science, except for instead of molesting children, he has molested and tortured data," Simberg wrote.

In a later post on National Review's website, conservative writer Mark Steyn quoted from Simberg's article and referred to Mann's research as "fraudulent."

CEI later removed the Sandusky comparison. The National Review refused to retract its post and instead published a response from its editor Rich Lowry with the headline: "Get Lost."

Two different judges refused to dismiss Mann's lawsuit, prompting the defendants to appeal. The appeals court ruled in favor of Mann in 2016 and in March of this year the District of Columbia Court of Appeals declined to rehear the case. REUTERS

Apple Watch Black Friday 2019 Deals: How to Afford It

A handful of big-box retailers are touting Apple Watch deals, but you'll be disappointed if you're looking to score the newest Series 5 model. All of the discounts we've seen are for the Series 3 or Series 4.

- Walmart is offering the Apple Watch Series 3 (GPS) 38mm for $129 (was $199).
- Amazon is also offering the Apple Watch Series 3 (GPS) 38mm, for $169.99 (was $199) — $40 more than Walmart's sale price.

- Target has the Apple Watch Series 3, also starting at $169.99 (regularly $199.99).
- Best Buy shoppers can save up to $300 on the Apple Watch Series 4.

How to decide if it's worth it:

If you've had your eye on an Apple Watch for a while, now is the time to act — you're unlikely to see bigger discounts on the smartwatch any other time of the year.

How to budget for an Apple Watch:

As with any bigger ticket purchase, you'll need to earmark that specific expense as part of the "wants" category within your monthly budget. If you're following the 50/30/20 budgeting system, no more than 30% of your income should be spent on wants. So, if you plan on dropping $169 on an Apple Watch, make sure expense doesn't put you over the edge.

Many Americans' Thanksgiving dream: a faux turkey in every pot

When American vegetarians, pescetarians and flexitarians sit down at the Thanksgiving table this week, there's one thing many agree they would be thankful for: a tasty, plant-based alternative to turkey.

Wildly popular for their taste and texture, Impossible Burger, Beyond Burger and other plant-based alternatives have revolutionized the fake meat market, and now account for about 5 percent of U.S. meat purchases.

But when it comes to turkey, the traditional star of Thanksgiving feasts, nothing has drummed up the same level of shopper excitement and acceptance.

"I'd love to see an Impossible turkey by next Thanksgiving," said Cordia Popp, 42, a vegetarian and stay-at-home mother of two who lives in upstate New York. The most authentic-tasting turkey alternative now on the market, Popp said, "doesn't have that shred like real turkey has."

Twenty-five years ago Tofurky, a tofu turkey, hit the market and now sells 400,000 roasts each holiday season. But many vegetarians say the search is still on for a plant-based alternative that hits the mark for turkey flavor and texture the same way plant-based options have nailed the beef target.

Beyond Meat urges fans to create holiday dishes from existing beef and sausage alternatives, while Impossible Foods told Reuters that a turkey alternative is among its long-term goals.

First to reach the finish line may be one of the major turkey producers, Butterball, Perdue Farms or Tyson Foods Inc. Each says it is developing vegetarian options as a growing number of Americans become so-called flexitarians, wading in and out of vegetarianism.

"Don't be surprised if more protein options find their way onto future Thanksgiving tables," a Tyson spokeswoman said. "We are looking at options across protein forms. We aren't sharing future product roll out dates at this time."

Bill See, a Perdue Farms spokesman, said,

"We have something in the pipeline but (it's) too early to talk about."

Butterball will run limited tests of plant-based turkey options next year, said Jeff Mundt, vice president of research & development and innovation. REUTERS

Tolerance towards LGBT+ people seen rising globally

LGBT+ people have seen a rise in tolerance in almost every region of the world over the last decade, according to an index released on Monday.

Iceland was named as the most tolerant country towards LGBT+ people in a survey of 167 countries by British think-tank the Legatum Institute, while central Asian country Tajikistan was in last place.

"It is encouraging to see that our 2019 Prosperity Index shows a rise in tolerance towards the LGBT community globally over the past decade," Shaun Flanagan of the institute's Centre for Metrics told the Thomson Reuters Foundation.

The data is part of the 2019 Legatum Prosperity Index, which measures a host of factors affecting countries' ability to create wealth and wellbeing, ranging from investment environment to health and personal freedom.

Social tolerance towards minority groups increased in 111 of 167 countries over the last decade, and across every region except for Eastern Europe & Sub-Saharan Africa, it found.

The rise in acceptance of LGBT+ people was particularly marked, rising from about one in four people expressing acceptance a decade ago to almost a third in this report.

Tolerance was measured according to responses to a Gallup poll that asked more than 130,000 people around the world whether their city or area was a good place for LGBT+ people to live.

Iceland was followed by The Netherlands and Norway, while Canada and Denmark took fourth and fifth place respectively. REUTERS

Democrat Warren accuses rival Bloomberg of trying to buy U.S. presidential election

Bloomberg announced his campaign Sunday.

Democratic presidential candidate Elizabeth Warren blasted billionaire Michael Bloomberg on Monday for launching his nascent White House bid with a $37 million TV advertising blitz, accusing the former New York City mayor of trying to buy American democracy.

Bloomberg, 77, a media mogul who will use his personal fortune to spend freely on his campaign and has said he will not take donations, officially jumped into the White House race as a moderate Democrat on Sunday.

Warren, 70, a liberal U.S. senator from Massachusetts and one of the leading Democratic contenders according to polls, has proposed a wealth tax on billionaires and frequently rails against corporate America, something Bloomberg has criticized.

At an event with voters in Ankeny, Iowa, Warren opened her remarks denouncing Bloomberg's tactics.

"Michael Bloomberg is making a bet about democracy in 2020. He doesn't need people, he only needs bags and bags of money. I think Michael Bloomberg is wrong," Warren said.

"That's exactly what's now in play in 2020 - which vision, which version of our democracy is going to win. If Michael Bloomberg's version of democracy wins then democracy changes. It's going to be which billionaire you can stomach," she said.

Bloomberg's campaign would not comment on Warren's remarks, but at Bloomberg's first campaign event on Monday in Norfolk, Virginia, he defended using his wealth to underwrite his candidacy.

"For years I've been using my resources for the things that matter to me," Bloomberg said, according to a video posted by PBS. "I am going to make my case and let the voters who are plenty smart make their choice."

Bloomberg's late entry into the race, less than three months before the Democrats' nominating contests begin, reflects his concern that none of the 17 other candidates vying to take on Republican president Donald Trump in next November's election can beat him.

Despite Warren's status among contenders in polls, moderates

"For years I've been using my resources for the things that matter to me. I am going to make my case and let the voters who are plenty smart make their choice."

like Bloomberg fear her planned costly expansion of government programs will alienate voters in battleground states.

At the same time, some Democrats have been unnerved by an uneven campaign performance from former Vice President Joe Biden, 77, while another leading candidate, South Bend Mayor Pete Buttigieg, 37, is seen in some quarters as too young and inexperienced.

At a campaign event in Creston, Iowa, Buttigieg declined to comment on Bloomberg's candidacy and plan to skip early-voting states in favor of competing in larger nominating contests later in the calendar.

But Lori Hays, 59, a Buttigieg supporter from Creston, said Bloomberg was making a mistake.

"As an Iowan, it makes me feel like they don't care about Iowa," Hays said. "To me, Bloomberg thinks he can buy the White House with his billions of dollars and that we Iowans don't matter."

BLACK FRIDAY Guide

iPhone Black Friday 2019 deals: Are they worth it?

NerdWallet is a personal finance website.

NerdWallet is here to help you win Black Friday, while leaving your budget intact. We spend the time, you save the money. Visit regularly for holiday tips and announcements about your favorite products. Black Friday is Nov. 29.

Black Friday is consistently one of the best times to save money on an iPhone. The top door-buster deals from retailers and cell phone carriers include new and past years' models discounted by hundreds of dollars or bundled with bonus gift cards. Some deals come with caveats, however, such as specific network or plan requirements. Here's what else to know before you shop for an iPhone.

Best Black Friday iPhone deals, 2019

Target: Get a $200 Target gift card with qualified activation of an iPhone 11 or iPhone Xs (various versions) with Verizon or AT&T. Deal starts on Black Friday at 7 a.m. and runs through Dec. 1.

Best Buy: Up to $500 off a new iPhone 11 or 11 Pro with qualified activation and trade-in through AT&T, Verizon or Sprint. T-Mobile: Get a free iPhone 8 when you activate a new voice line and trade in a qualifying older iPhone.

Walmart: Get a $450 Walmart eGift when you buy a new iPhone XS and activate it on a purchase installment plan with AT&T, Sprint or Verizon. Gift cards also available for the iPhone XS Max or XR ($400) and the iPhone 11, 11 Pro and 11 Pro Max ($300). Earn up to $250 more on a separate eGift card when you trade in an eligible phone.

Best Black Friday iPhone deals, 2018

Last year, big-box stores offered some of the best discounts and deals on iPhones old and new. Highlights included:

Target shoppers could get a $250 Target gift card with iPhone XS or XS Max activation on Verizon, Sprint or AT&T networks.

Best Buy slashed iPhone prices by up to $200.

Walmart gave in-store shoppers on select networks a $400 Walmart gift card free with purchase of the iPhone 8, 8 Plus or X.

Some deals were available earlier than others. For example, while Target's gift card bundles launched at 7 a.m. on Friday, Nov. 23, Walmart's iPhone promotion kicked off at 6 p.m. on Nov. 22.

Black Friday is finally here. We can all agree, there's nothing like getting a great deal, especially when purchasing gifts during the holiday season. From new televisions to jewelry, there's nothing like finding the perfect gift for someone.

WalletHub's holiday shopping survey revealed that 52 percent of people don't think Black Friday offers the best deals, but that doesn't deter folks from shopping on the retail holiday.

LEAVE IT ON THE FLOOR

Ladies and Gentlemen:

It's shocking how many people are in the habit of picking things up from the floor and putting them on a dining or serving table. Apparently these people think that they're doing something good, but in reality they're creating a health hazard by putting the dirty object - it is dirty, even if it was clean before it fell - on the table.

Gingerbread hugs and peppermint kisses

Host Paige Davis talks new spirited competition show, "Holiday Gingerbread Showdown."

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

At one point or another during the holiday season, most of us were involved with making a gingerbread house. Some were massive and intricate, others were uh ... unique, but most of all were made with love. However, whether you were a fan of the classic seasonal tradition or not, chances are you were still impressed with the really amazing creations some bakers and dessert chefs were able to whip up gingerbread-style, and in Food Network's latest holiday competition series get ready to have your jaw drop. Host Paige Davis sat down with Metro to give the scoop on the show, why she likes this specific competition series and dive into more on why "Holiday Gingerbread Showdown" will truly get you into the holiday spirit.

How did you first get involved with hosting for "Holiday Gingerbread Showdown?"
It's a funny story actually.

There's a woman at TLC named Megan and she called me and prefaced by saying, "Now that Discovery and Scripps have merged, Food Network is no longer our competition, we're all family. We were wondering if you'd like to do 'Holiday Gingerbread Showdown.'" I paused for a moment, and I thought really deeply and I said "I will so lose, but yes. I'm game and I will do it."

What will viewers be watching go down on each episode of "Holiday Gingerbread Showdown?"

So, there are three contestants per episode, and the winner of each episode moves on to be the three contestants in the finale. Each episode has its own theme, and the contestants were told what that theme was ahead of time because these gingerbread pieces take literally hundreds of hours to make — they are massive, the baking alone takes a tremendous amount of time. They are able to plan but they have to ship all of that stuff to the studio in Los Angeles with only ten hours left to complete their masterpiece. They have to assemble it and re-make any pieces that might have broken in shipping or transport —

that's where a lot of the jeopardy comes in. Even the more experienced bakers or competitors found themselves with broken pieces, sometimes large and sometimes small. You've still got to take the time to whip up the batter and re-make whatever pieces broke, so it's a lot. Also on any Food Network show, you have to have something for the judges to eat, right? You can't really eat these gingerbread masterpieces. They are technically edible, you wouldn't get sick, but it's not like eating a gingerbread cookie. You don't want to take these houses apart, so we throw challenges at them midway and will have them make a special treat for the judges, and not only does it have to be delicious and accomplished right now, but it also has to fit into the overall theme of the piece.

Hosting must be such a fun gig, are there any fun memories from filming that stand out to you?
I'm probably throwing myself under the bus here, but as much as I love to entertain and love to cook and be in the kitchen, there are a lot of things that I don't know. I definitely don't do a lot of baking, and I really had no clue what modeling chocolate was — I'd never heard of it. So, the contestants were getting ready to do their treat for the judges and one of the contestants was using modeling chocolate and Mary Berg, one of our judges, was talking about how she hoped one of the treats was chocolate because she was in the mood. So I'm going on and on about how Mary must be so happy because this treat is made of chocolate, and they were all looking at me like I was crazy. Eventually, I clue into that fact, and later on Adam Young explains to me that modeling chocolate has the same taste as a bland, stale Tootsie Roll. So yeah, at that moment I was not the brightest light on the tree.

Is there anything that sets "Holiday Gingerbread Showdown" apart from other competition shows?

When you think about a gingerbread competition, everyone thinks it's just going to be a house — that's what we all know and love. We do have structures in the competition that are like houses, but there are also structures in this competition that will blow your mind. It's really incredible. But I also do think part of the reason people will like the show is because it's the type of comfort television they've known to grow and love on Food Network. I like that we really get to know the contestants, it's not just a one-hour special, it's a four-night series. "Holiday Gingerbread Showdown" premieres Dec. 1 on Food Network.

An oasis of flavors

Inchin's Bamboo Garden is now open in Center City.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

In the City of Brotherly Love, there are a plethora of colorful eateries and bars that offer delicious cuisines from all over the world — Philly truly is a foodie city. Now all foodies, eastern-cuisine lovers and culinary connoisseurs can rejoice because another top-notch eatery had been added to the impressive list of restaurants in Philadelphia, but this one is quite unique. Inchin's Bamboo Garden offers a delicious oasis of Indian and Chinese fused menu options with a tranquil and chic atmosphere right in Center City. It's truly a treat for your tastebuds and eyes. According to a release, Inchin's Bamboo Garden has numerous locations nationwide and is a unique culinary fusion of many far eastern cuisines. Dishes are inspired by Malaysian, Indian and Chinese cooking styles, which takes a natural flow of directly introducing Thai cuisine thereafter. Subsequently, the menu represents Asian countries such as Indonesia, Singapore and Taiwan, resulting in a truly unique concept.

Each dish is flavorful, unique and truly unlike anything you've ever tried before — plus the presentation is superb on its own merits. Standout menu items include the chicken 65 (made with curry leaf, bell pepper, red onion, dry red chili, cumin and mustard seed for $6), Hakka noodles (thin eggless noodles with shredded vegetables for $14), cauliflower manchurian (made with cilantro, red onion, green chili and celery for $14), paneer tacos (featuring an assortment of cheeses, siracha and ranch for $12) and date wontons with ice cream for $8.

The cuisine may be the initial draw to this new Center City hotspot, but the cocktails are truly what stop the show at Inchin's. Philadelphians can look for an eclectic mix of carefully crafted cocktails, which thankfully are mostly available during Inchin's Happy Hour as well (which by the way is every single day from 4 p.m. - 6 p.m.) Highlighted cocktails include the Tokyo Twist (made with cucumber vodka, spicy ginger beer, Baltimore bitters, cilantro, lime, jalapeno infusion and soda water for $13), the Hazy Temple (featuring Nikka Japanese whiskey, Benedictine, vermouth hickory smoke, earl grey bitters, barrel-aged bitter and a blackberry peppercorn infusion for $15) and the Dragon's Milk (made from plantation pineapple rum, lime, light coconut milk, passion fruit and wildflower honey for $13.)

So if you wanted a chance to explore multiple eastern cuisines in one sitting, or you just simply want to energize your palette with some zesty flavors, head to new Center City hotspot Inchin's Bamboo Garden for an experience that will keep you coming back for more.

Inchin's Bamboo Garden is open Monday-Friday from 11 a.m. - 10 p.m., and Saturday-Sunday from 11:30 a.m. - 10 p.m. Inchin's enticing Happy Hour features cocktails, beer, wine and a wide variety of menu small bites daily as well.

New free $$$$ Thanksgiving offer

MATT BURKE

Matt Burke is a veteran sports journalist and the Founder and Editor in Chief of MetroBet.

DraftKings Sportsbook and MetroBet are offering up a Thanksgiving parlay special offer this week as you can get a risk-free $100 simply by going to tinyurl.com/txxphwf

The Bears and Lions have been two of the more disappointing teams in the NFL this season, as both entered the year with playoff aspirations. The Bears are 5-6 and should probably start running an offense that excludes the forward pass due to embarrassment.

The Lions are the same old Lions, stuck in neutral at 3-7-1, without much hope for the future.

Both teams have also been horrible against the spread this season as Chicago is a league-worst 3-8-0 ATS while the Lions are 4-7-0 ATS.

The only way to get through this early Thanksgiving Day game is to bet on it, of course.

The Bears and Lions met in Chicago just a few weeks ago on Nov. 10, with Chicago grabbing a 20-13 win.

Bears quarterback Mitch Trubisky was actually competent in that one, as he completed 16-of-23 passes for 173 yards, three touchdown passes and zero picks. It's a small sample size (just two career games) but Trubisky has had the best performances of his career against Matt Patricia's defenses.

ALL GETTY IMAGES

Last season, Trubisky passed for a career-high 355 yards against the Lions with three TD passes and zero picks.

Trubisky should again be able to pass like an NFL quarterback on Thanksgiving Day, as Detroit's defense is even worse than it was last year. The Lions are allowing 26.5 points per game this season (25th in NFL), are giving up 275.5 passing yards per game (30th in NFL) and are allowing 120.7 rushing yards per game (24th in NFL).

Throwing a wrench into this game, betting-wise, is if Lions QB Matthew Stafford (back) miraculously suits up ... but that's looking doubtful. Jeff Driskel is again likely to get the nod and the Bears' still stout defense should be able to feast. Driskel tossed three interceptions and finished with an atrocious 50.9 passer rating in Detroit's 19-16 loss to the Redskins this past Sunday.

The play: Bears -2 (-110)

NFL Week 13 betting: Titans at Colts

Best bets

The Tennessee Titans have looked like an entirely new team since Ryan Tannehill took over under center. They should continue trending up as they take on the Indianapolis Colts at Lucas Oil Stadium this Sunday.

The Titans are 4-1 straight-up and against the spread since Tannehill was anointed as the starting quarterback, amassing 370 yards or more of offense four times over that span. Teams haven't been able to cheat up on running back Derrick Henry, which partially explains why he's rushed for an average of 115 yards per game since Marcus Mariota was benched.

Meanwhile, the Colts' scoring average has dropped to 20.2 points per game over their last five tilts as they went 2-3 straight-up and against the spread. Whether it's Jacoby Brissett or Brian Hoyer under center, Indy simply hasn't gotten great production from the quarterback position in that span, producing fewer than 200 passing yards in five consecutive contests.

The Titans are in good position to win this one outright, but bettors should grab the field goal just in case.
The play: Titans +3

Little Black Pill is Taking Over The Male Potency Market

A new drug-free alternative is expected to give big pharma's famous sex pill a run for its money. And the best part? No prescription will be required.

For Immediate Release

US – For almost three decades, the “little blue pill” has dominated the sex pill market with little to no competition.

But industry insiders believe its time on top may soon be over with news that the highly-anticipated, drug-free alternative, Onyx, is now available.

Cleverly dubbed the “little black pill” by its users, the new once-daily tablet targets the same erection-pathways as traditional sex pills but with one major difference.

According to researchers, it's this difference which has big pharma so worried and consumers so excited.

Always Ready, Always on the Mind

If you go on Viagra's website, the first thing they tell you is, “you will not get an erection just by taking Viagra. You must be sexually stimulated for it to work.”

To Dr. Allen Green, that statement is extremely concerning.

“Most of my patients with erection issues have lost their sex drives, too. They're ashamed to admit it but they don't even think about sex that much unless it's worrying about the last time they had it. And other doctors will attest.”

It was this fact that inspired Green to develop Onyx.

Not only does his amazing little-tablet help men stay harder and firmer for longer, it also triggers intense arousal. In laymen terms, it makes users hornier so that sex is always on their minds.

Green shares that this one difference is powerful enough to completely transform your sex life, at any age, but works miracles for those in their senior years.

“I can't tell you the difference this makes. The anticipation it creates is absolutely incredible. Since men know they're going to be able to perform, they're thinking about sex all the time.”

Green shares the secret to Onyx is something called MCMOA or multi-channel mechanism of action.

Where most sex pills work in just one way, his works in two. The major advantage of using natural ingredients vs. a drug (chemicals).

Essentially his pill increases levels of a specific male hormone in the body tied to arousal (among other things) while boosting blood flow at the very same time.

The combination leads to strong and penetrating erections and incredible arousal – the perfect recipe for phenomenal sex.

The Experiment That Changed Men's Sexual Health

Dr. Green explains his inspiration for Onyx came after reading that you had to be aroused for the “little blue pill” to work.

An expert in natural medicines, he began experimenting with plant-based extracts with strong track records in men's sexual health.

In fact, these extracts were shown to get men harder, firmer, and hornier in real clinical studies.

“Most people have no idea these kinds of ingredients exist. It's a shame too because they're incredibly powerful. Some are even patented”, explains Green.

“Onyx is a blend of two of the most potent and studied ingredients I've ever come across. I also put them in the exact dosages used in clinical trials so users can experience the same amazing results achieved by men in the trial.”

A Clinical Dose in Every Capsule

Two primary ingredients make up Onyx.

The first is the patented ingredient Testofen. The second is the patented ingredient PrimaVie.

Both are found in a clinical dose in each tablet.

Research shows that as men get older, their testosterone levels gradually decline due to increased activity of the enzyme aromatase.

As less testosterone is produced and estrogen takes over the body, men begin to experience exhaustion, muscle loss, fat gain (man boobs) and a plummeting libido.

At the same exact time, the circulatory systems often begin to fail. With less blood flow to the penis, erections become weak and often too soft for sex.

The active ingredients in Onyx have been proven to increase testosterone levels sharply while improving blood flow to the penis – a multi-channel mechanism of action absent in most sex pills!

Harder, Firmer Erections and a Wild Desire for Sex

In an 8-week, randomized, double-blind, placebo controlled clinical study published by the Journal of Sport and Health Science, participants taking 600 mg of Testofen (the same dose in Onyx) experienced a 99% increase in free testosterone levels.

They also saw an increase in lean muscle, less body fat, and an increase in energy levels.

A secondary study on Testofen proved even more exciting. When asked about their sexual desire after taking the ingredient, men raved they were aroused all day long!

They were thinking about sex more often, were super aroused, and could orgasm.

“We were thrilled by the results we saw with Testofen. But then we added PrimaVie with it and things got even better!” raves Green.

According to published research on PrimaVie, the extract increases circulation through the entire body, including the penis. The result is longer, harder, more penetrating erections.

“I'm having the best sex I've had in years” explains Adam M of New York.

“I'm horny all the time. I feel like a kid again. Sex is always on my mind and I'm having a lot more of it. And the best part is I just take one pill a day. That's it. I don't have to time anything or wait for it to kick in”.

Pre-Release of Onyx Only Available to Readers

This is the official release of Onyx in the United States. The company has decided that it will not distribute their product to stores to ensure quality control. It may only be purchased directly.

A special hotline number with discounted pricing has been created for all Massachusetts residents. Discounts will be available starting today at 6:00AM and will automatically be applied to all callers.

Your Toll-Free Hotline number is 1-800-892-7279 and will only be open for the next 48 hours. Only a limited discounted supply of Onyx currently available in your region.

AS EAGLES TUMBLE, TIME TO PUT THE HEAT ON ROSEMAN

THE SPORTS PROFESSOR

GLEN MACNOW

@RealGlenMacnow

We could fill an encyclopedia with the blunders committed in the Eagles' 17-9 debacle against Seattle on

Eagles GM Howie Roseman has seen his team fall from Super Bowl champions to a team in danger of completely missing the playoffs in just two seasons. GETTY IMAGES

Sunday. From Wentz's putrid performance to Pederson's pathetic play calling, there are ample reasons for ranting. I don't have space in this fine tabloid to list them all. And I can't say anything about the QB's lost confidence that isn't already being diagnosed by every amateur shrink in the media.

So instead, let's look off the field for now and up into the executive suite. And there, over the owner's shoulder, is the general manager. Let's be honest: Howie Roseman has had a terrible season.

It's Roseman who's the architect of this team, from its coaches to its roster to its training staff. It's Roseman who failed to adequately replace departing brainpower, while sentimentally re-signing over-the-hill veterans. It's Roseman who whiffed in free agency and secured little help in the draft.

Not long ago, of course, Howie was rightly hailed as a prodigy. Few executives in NFL history hit the target as he did in 2017, culminating in the franchise's first Super Bowl title. That will never be erased, and I'll stand to applaud when he gets inducted into the Eagles Hall of Fame.

But "genius" is a temporary title, and this crown has tumbled off Roseman's head. Let's look at some of his moves since then:

After the Super Bowl, offensive coordinator Frank Reich and QBs coach John DeFilippo left for bigger jobs. That's the nature of the business. But Roseman replaced them by promoting insiders Mike Groh and Press Taylor, respectively. Two seasons later, both appear to be overmatched.

In 2017, the GM struck gold with short-term additions like LeGarrette Blount, Patrick Robinson, Jay Ajayi and others. You may give some of the credit to now-departed personnel czar Joe Douglas. Regardless, Howie made the final call.

This year's incoming class featured LB Zach Brown and safeties Andrew Sendejo and Johnathan Cyprien — all abject busts who have since been jettisoned. Other new faces like DL Malik Jackson, WR DeSean Jackson and RB Jordan Howard have been injured. You can't blame Roseman for that — although the fact that DeSean hasn't played a full season of games since 2013 suggests there should have been a Plan B for a speed guy.

The Eagles also signed and released linebacker L.J. Fort. He now starts for the first-place Ravens, who signed him to a two-year contract extension. And Jordan Hicks, deposited after four seasons in green, is having a Pro Bowl season with 111 tackles in Arizona.

So who stuck around? Sentimental favorites like Darren Sproles — injured again. And Jason Peters — who taps out more often than a third-rate pro wrestler. Vinny Curry came home on a $1 million contract and has produced one sack.

Howie also gave plush contracts to wide receivers Alshon Jeffery and Nelson Agholor. The first appears on the slippery slope of decline and the second seems afraid of his shadow.

I could go on with missed trade opportunities (Jadeveon Clowney) and questionable draft decisions (JJ Arcega-Whiteside over D.K. Metcalf or Terry McLaurin).

Let's concede that in hindsight, it's easy to pick apart the work of others. And this disappointing season might be viewed differently if injuries hadn't cursed this team.

But here we are. We can roast Wentz for his mechanics and psyche. We can slam Doug Pederson for in-game decisions. No player or coach is exempt, as the Eagles have fallen to 5-6.

Nor is the front office. And this season, the general manager has performed as poorly as anyone else.
